H1N1 brought death in Korea

As of Aug 16, the H1N1 flu virus brought two deaths in South Korea.

The Ministry for Health, Welfare and Family Affairs confirmed an additional 76 cases of influenza A on Monday, amid growing concerns about the spread of the contagious disease after two deaths from the virus were reported over the weekend.

Also health ministry stated that the new patients, participating in an international event on the southern island of Jeju, tested positive for the H1N1 virus. In 107 days since its first case, the number of people who got infected with the H1N1 flu virus exceeded 2,165 in South Korea. Most of those showed mild symptoms and recovered fully, with around 500 still being treated at home or in hospitals.

As schools and colleges prepare to welcome students back into session this and next month, they face an unpredictable yet unavoidable disruption. The H1N1 virus has been circulating all summer, now health officials are bracing for an even bigger spread of the novel virus as students of all ages congregate in the public transportations, classrooms, and cafeterias etc.

Also many of school participants are very concerned about a second wave in September and said that they know it is here now, active, and they're thinking all it's going to require is crowding.

To prevent the flu from spreading further, the government said it would supply antiviral drugs, including Tamiflu, which could treat 5.31 million patients, to public health centers nationwide. To secure enough vaccines the government plans to spend 174.8 billion won. The drugs are expected to be available beginning in November, ahead of the winter flu season, according to the finance ministry.

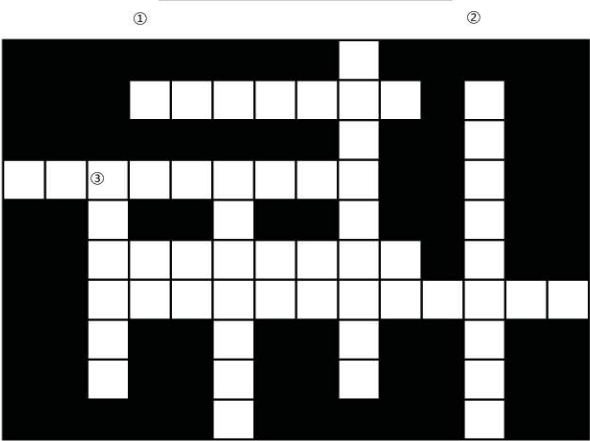

Many schools and health departments in the United States are prepared for a stronger version of the H1N1 virus to emerge as students come back into the classrooms next week.

A vaccination for the virus is currently in production and will most likely be distributed to students during the fall semester. When the vaccination is ready, it will consist of two shots and with proper release forms will be distributed to students for no cost at the schools.

The schools and health departments in the United States have taken this pandemic seriously already and are working to be trained and well informed about the virus. They said their goal is to be prepared to do everything they can. Also to help contain the spread of the virus, parents are strongly suggested to keep their child home from school if feeling sick.

Today's Dialogue

Carl: Amy, how did you do on your exam today?

Amy: So-so... it was a little harder than I thought it would be.
How about you?

Carl: Me too; I think I did ok. But hey, I heard that someone in our class got caught cunning on the exam.

Amy: Really? So what happened to the student?

Carl: He got in trouble by the teacher, and then a zero on the exam.

I heard he cried a lot because of it, too.

Amy: Yeah, I feel sort of bad for him. But of course, cunning on an exam means you have to ①receive the consequences, or else it wouldn't be fair for us, right?
②We studied diligently for the exam.

Today's Lesson:

커닝(cunning): 교활, 간사; 악삭빠름

남의 것을 보고하거나 정당하지 않은 방법으로 시험을 보는 것을 우리는 “커닝”한다고 한다. 하지만 우리가 흔히 사용하는 “커닝”은 “교활” 혹은 “간사”의 의미를 가진 단어로 cheating (on the exam)으로 바꿔 사용해야 정확한 표현이다.

Cheating: 속임수를 쓰는, 사기를 치는

Example Sentences:

[1] A cunning fox is always able to catch its prey.
(악삭빠른 여우는 항상 먹이를 잡는다.)

[2] Sally was caught cheating on her math exam, and was sent to the Principal's office.
(Sally는 수학시험 때 부정행위(치팅) 하여 교장선생님께 불려갔다.)

More Example Sentences:

① Cheating in school is not the way to get good grades.
->부정행위를 하는 것은 높은 성적을 얻기에 좋은 방법이 아니다.
② By his own admission, he cheated at an examination.
->자백에 의하면 그는 시험에서 부정행위를 했다.

3 American Students Detained in Iran

Reported by Grace Hong

Three UC Berkeley graduates are currently being detained in Iran. Former student Shane Bauer, who left for Kurdistan, Iraq several weeks ago, was charged for crossing the border into Iran illegally with two companions. Though friends say that the event must have been a mistake, Iraqi officials claim that the three are C.I.A agents who entered the country intentionally. Friends of Bauer, who is a freelance journalist and fluent in Arabic, insist that he is innocent, despite these allegations. “I’m terrified... I have no idea what the Iranian authorities are going to do,” said one friend. Even Bauer’s former professor, Jerry Sanders, showed support for the student’s innocence. “He’s a sophisticated and well seasoned traveler, and if a border guard told him not to cross a border, he wouldn’t have done it,” he said. Currently, Swiss diplomats are negotiating with Iran for the status of the students, though no significant progress has been noted yet.
